

With best wishes from Anklam

Dear reader,

the topics of our October Newsletter are as diverse as the colors of autumn.

First, you are cordially invited to come see us at CPhI worldwide, the world's leading pharmaceutical conference.

As an integral part of pharmaceutical products, plant extracts play a more and more important role. Hence, we would like to present some of our extracts in our product line in this newsletter and take a closer look at one very special plant: the passion flower.

Our plant of the month of October: the Passion Flower

The passion flower owes its name to its peculiar appearance of its blossom, which was compared to Christ's suffering on the cross.

Originally brought to European gardens from the tropics as an ornamental plant, it has been known for its calming and anxiety-reducing effects in medicine since around the 18th century.

Our modern, fast-paced day and age, as well as the desire over the past years to decelerate have caused the demand for soothing and relaxing homeopathics and phytopharmaceuticals to boom.

IMS Health has registered significant growth over 3 percent in the anti-anxiety market in 2012. This is how this indication is one of four engines of growth in the industry.

Since the passion flower is known as a phytopharmaceutical product with no known side effects, it is one of the most attractive active ingredients in the field.

We would be happy to present you our extract.
